1.0 INTRODUCTION

All final year students from UTAR FEGT are required to undertake a unit named Project which will last for two (2) long trimesters.

As this unit is a design and/or research based, students are required to perform research, and/or development work on the selected field or topic, especially on real-world problems. Such a study would motivate students to produce practical solution(s) and provide them with the opportunity to use tools and techniques for engineering problem solving. Learning from experience is the best learning process, especially for applied science or engineering related studies and this unit uses such approaches. On the other hand, the students will also acquire skills on project management.

Working under the guidance of supervisor(s) would help to shape the direction of the student’s near future career development. It would also provide students with better team work and inculcate with development of professional relationship which would benefits them in future employment.

This guideline is prepared for students and supervisors for enabling them to execute their respective roles and duties in an effective manner, hence benefiting both parties. With that, the success of this unit can then be realised.

The project flow and timeline for this unit are summarized in Section 10. Actions will be taken for the student who is unable to fulfil the criteria stated in that section, e.g. being barred from oral presentation.

2.0 OBJECTIVE AND PURPOSE

This unit aims to develop a framework which will enhance the skill of student in the process of applying knowledge, expanding thoughts, solving problems independently and presenting findings through minimum guidance and supervision.
3.0 SCOPE OF WORK

The project can be in the form of laboratory experiment, computer programming, modelling, simulation and analysis and/or product design. The area and scope of the project should be narrowed so that it is feasible and could be completed within the allocated time frame. The project work must also exhibit element of originality, which indicates the maturity level for a final year bachelor degree programme project.
